Colleagues,

Welcome to the 2016 Annual Trustees Conference. Trustees are leaders when they promote and sustain their colleges’ missions to assure student learning and make a difference for their communities. They are responsible for anticipating and responding to new challenges related to environmental and architectural sustainability, leadership turnover, accountability, and changing communities. Effective governing boards ensure that their colleges continue to provide high quality education and service.

Effective governing boards are created by dedicated, knowledgeable trustees and chief executives. Your participation in the 2016 Trustees Conference will strengthen the skills and knowledge required to lead your colleges and be accountable to your communities. Conference speakers and sessions will explore student success, fiscal responsibility, educational trends and effective trusteeship.

Thank you on behalf of CCCT for the work you do and the leadership you provide for the people of California.

Moving forward,

Janet Chaniot, President

Integrated Energy Strategies for Community College League of California Members

The League has teamed up with Constellation to bring competitive pricing and energy management solutions to our members.

As a top operating cost to most businesses, energy is an important part of your overall district strategy. Through a strategic approach to energy management, your district can make a direct impact to your bottom line.

Constellation is a supplier of competitive electricity, natural gas, energy efficiency, and distributed generation projects in California. We can help your district apply the best combination of products and services so you can focus on a holistic strategy rather than the procurement process. Excellence Through Equity: Principles and Practices

While the movement for standards and accountability has largely succeeded in bringing greater attention to disparities in student achievement, surprisingly little attention has been given to what it takes to create conditions in schools that will make achievement for all students more likely. Missing from much of the policy debate related to achievement is how to place equity at the center of education reform, and how to support and cultivate effective teaching in schools. This presentation will describe principles and practices that have proven effective in meeting the needs of a wide variety of learners. It will also explore how schools can develop effective partnerships with parents and community groups to further efforts to raise achievement.

Biography

Pedro Noguera is the Distinguished Professor of Education at the Graduate School of Education and Information Studies at UCLA. His research focuses on the ways in which schools are influenced by social and economic conditions, as well as by demographic trends in local, regional and global contexts. He is the author of twelve books and over 200 articles and monographs. He serves on the boards of numerous national and local organizations and appears as a regular commentator on educational issues on CNN, MSNBC, National Public Radio, and other national news outlets. Prior to joining the faculty at UCLA he served as a tenured professor and holder of endowed chairs at New York University (2003 – 2015) Harvard University (2000 – 2003) and the University of California, Berkeley (1990 – 2000). From 2009 – 2012 he served as a Trustee for the State University of New York (SUNY) as an appointee of the Governor. In 2014 he was elected to the National Academy of Education. Noguera recently received awards from the Center for the Advanced Study of the Behavioral Sciences at Stanford University, from the National Association of Secondary Principals, and from the McSilver Institute at NYU for his research and advocacy efforts aimed at fighting poverty.
General Session Lunch – Saturday, April 30 • 12:15 p.m.

The Learning, Business and Moral Case for Open Educational Resources and Open Policies

The Internet, increasingly affordable computing and bandwidth, open licensing, open access journals and open educational resources (OER) provide the foundation for a world in which a higher education can be a basic human right. Governments and foundations are supporting this shift with a move to open policies: requiring public access to publicly (and foundation) funded resources. Cable Green, Director of Global Learning at Creative Commons, will provide an overview of open licensing and OER, and discuss specific examples where institution, provinces / states, nations and foundations have moved the default on funding from “closed” to “open.” He will also explore new OER projects that are pushing open education further into the mainstream.

Biography

Cable works with the global open education community to leverage open licensing, open content, and open policies to significantly improve access to quality, affordable, education and research resources so everyone in the world can attain all the education they desire. His career is dedicated to increasing access to educational opportunities for everyone around the world. He’s a leading advocate for open licensing policies that ensure publicly funded education materials are freely and openly available to the public that paid for them. Cable has 20 years of academic technology, online learning, and open education experience and helped establish the Open Course Library. Cable holds a PhD in educational psychology from Ohio State University, and enjoys motorcycling and playing in the mountains with his family. He lives in Olympia with his wife and two boys.
Closing General Session – Saturday, April 30 • 12:15 p.m.

The American Way of Poverty
Sasha Abramsky will explore how and why poverty exists on the scale that it does in modern-day America; what the political and economic implications of both growing inequality and growing economic insecurity are; and how this plays out in a multitude of arenas, from housing markets to campuses. He will also explore the systemic, big picture solutions to many of the causes and consequences of the poverty epidemic, including reforms in how we finance our higher education systems.

Biography
Sasha Abramsky was born in England in 1972, grew up in London, and studied politics, philosophy, and economics at Balliol College, Oxford. He got his B.A. in 1993 and moved to New York to study journalism at the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism. He lived in the Big Apple for ten years, before moving to California in 2003. He currently lives in Sacramento with his wife and two kids. His latest book is a family memoir about his grandparents, Chimen and Miriam Abramsky, and of their unique home at 5 Hillway. In their semi-detached house, so deceptively ordinary from the outside, they created a remarkable House of Books. It became the repository for Chimen’s collection of thousands upon thousands of books, manuscripts and other printed, handwritten and painted documents, representing his journey through the great political, philosophical, religious and ethical debates that have shaped the western world. He teaches writing one day a week at the U.C. Davis writing program, is a fellow at the New York City-based Demos think tank, and spends most of the rest of his work-time reporting and writing magazine articles and books. For the past two years, he has worked on Voices of Poverty: A Narrative of America’s Poor. It has provided the material for his book on poverty 21st-century-style, The American Way of Poverty: How the Other Half Still Lives. His previous book, Inside Obama’s Brain, was published by Penguin’s Portfolio imprint (December, 2009).

Leave with the ingredients that lead to success, including: how to clearly define roles and responsibilities, how to build public-private partnerships that support and expand college programs, and how to measure the “return on investment” in staff and volunteer effort. You’ll come away with a firm understanding of how successful institutionally-related foundations operate and the ways governing boards support foundation alignment with college priorities and ultimate success.

Catching Up for Lost Time: Master Planning for the Future (FR, SS) .................................. Salon C
The reality of existing buildings, complex and phased implementation and budget must be balanced with the needs of 21st Century, active learning, evolving technology needs, and community vision. These often must be balanced with the realities of likely resources, local General Obligation Bond or the ever illusive State dollars. Please join us in an interactive workshop that will illustrate how all voices, from trustees to custodians, are heard, and how to develop a consensus building process.

If Only Emergency Plans Were Valued By the Pound! (FR, G, SS) .................................. Salon D
What makes a college emergency plan valuable and effective, its size or its content? Effective emergency plans are those that communicate the essentials of what needs to be done when something goes wrong. This workshop will look at the All-Hazards approach to emergency management, starting with a strong core to identify the authority for the plan, the objective of your plan, the stakeholders involved, the locations and routes affected, the levels of response, and the functional structure of the college when you shift from “Education” to “Emergency.” We will focus on both the common, well known risks as well as the newer emerging risks like terrorism, shootings and swatting.

The Learning, Business and Moral Case for
Open Educational Resources and Open Policies

The Internet, increasingly affordable computing and bandwidth, open licensing, open access journals and open educational resources (OER) provide the foundation for a world in which a higher education can be a basic human right. Governments and foundations are supporting this shift with a move to open policies: requiring public access to publicly (and foundation) funded resources. Dr. Cable Green, Director of Global Learning at Creative Commons, will provide an overview of open licensing and OER, and discuss specific examples where institution, provinces / states, nations and foundations have moved the default on funding from “closed” to “open.” He will also explore new OER projects that are pushing open education further into the mainstream.

Trustees Conference • 44
Corporate Partners Program
The League’s Corporate Partners represent the wide range of firms who support the mission of the community colleges. In addition, the firms provide invaluable services to the colleges in their particular specialty areas.

Credit Card Processing Program new
Partnering with Heartland/TouchNet, the League has secured a contract for low credit and debit card processing fees to reduce costs that colleges would otherwise pay upon use of a credit or debit card. Aimed at providing a reduction in operating expenses, this program has the potential to save hundreds of thousands of dollars for colleges.

Library Consortium Program
The League manages the system-wide licensing of library electronic subscriptions for all 113 community colleges in California. By participating in this consortium, members realize demonstrable savings on library subscriptions and purchases on electronic databases, catalogs, books, and journals.

Pension Rate Stabilization Program new
Designed to assist districts in offsetting the rising costs of pension funds (PERS and STRS), this program is a partnership with PARS (Public Agency Retirement Services) to provide an investment fund with an irrevocable trust structure similar to the League’s OPEB JPA program. The program is designed to give districts an opportunity to invest funds to provide budget stability in future years.

Policy & Procedure Service
The Policy & Procedure Service provides template language for over 380 board policies and administrative procedures applicable to California community colleges. The 70 subscribing districts receive biannual legal updates that alert them to changes in state/federal laws and regulations as well as regional accreditation standards.

Retiree Health Benefits (OPEB) Joint Powers Authority
The Retiree Health Benefits JPA gives districts an opportunity to invest funds to offset their retiree health liability in an irrevocable trust. With a number of districts participating and nearly $150 million invested, the trust gives districts flexibility to maintain direction over their investments and transparency for their constituents.
